Police: MBTA bus driver lied, blamed crash on sneezing fit

Cops: T driver lied about phone use prior to crash

An MBTA bus driver allegedly lied to police by telling them an allergy-induced sneezing fit caused her to crash a Route 57 bus in Newton when in actuality a cellphone may have been to blame.

Shanna Shaw, an 18-year veteran of the MBTA, is being charged with obstruction of justice and was cited for operating to endanger, speeding and impeded operation following the Sunday-morning crash, which injured nine passengers, as well as Shaw.

According to an MBTA Transit Police affidavit, Shaw told police that as she turned left approaching the Route 90 overpass, she was in the middle lane and "began to sneeze. Because of the sneezing, she stated she closed her eyes. When she opened them back up, she recognized the bus was turning too far to the left."

Shaw said she slid out of her seat as she tried to gain control of the bus, but was unable to do so, and fell to the floor as the bus traveled over the sidewalk and collided with the guardrail.

Quoted

"Because of the sneezing, [Shaw] stated she closed her eyes. When she opened her eyes, she recognized the bus was turning too far to the left."

MBTA Transit Police affidavit

When questioned by police, Shaw initially denied that she had a cellphone in her possession at the time of the crash, and said she did not re-enter the bus to radio for help after evacuating.

"I did not want to go back on the bus because it was hanging over the highway," Shaw allegedly said.

However, according to the affidavit, Shaw admitted that she did have a cellphone after police heard it ringing in her purse while she was being treated at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Brighton.

Police reviewed surveillance video, which showed Shaw apparently holding what appeared to be a cellphone in her left hand and an unidentified item in her right hand while operating the bus, the affidavit states.

After the crash, surveillance allegedly shows Shaw did re-enter the bus to retrieve an item from the ground, according to the affidavit.

In 2009, the MBTA banned operators from possessing electronic devices while on the job.

Police said Shaw's phone had no record of calls or text messages after 5:30 a.m.

She has been placed on paid administrative leave, a T spokesman said.

Marking history on the Greenway

About 350 years after Zipporah Potter Atkins became the first woman of African descent to purchase a house and land in Boston, city leaders gathered at the former site to mark where her house once stood. Larceny. NY woman gets jail for stealing $480K from One Fund charity

A New York woman who defrauded the fund meant to help the victims of the Boston Marathon bombings and used hundreds of thousands of dollars to secure construction of a brand-new home for herself will now be living behind bars.

Audrea Gause, 27, of Troy, New York, pleaded guilty on Tuesday to larceny over $250 during a hearing at Suffolk Superior Court. She was sentenced to serve between 2½ years and three years in state prison, according to the attorney general's office.

Authorities said that Gause submitted a notarized claim and purported Boston Medical Center records to the One Fund about two months after the bombings. She eventually received a $480,000 check.

Gause spent more than $377,000 on a down payment for a new construction home, prosecutors said.

Investigators later received information that Gause was not in Boston during the marathon. An inquiry found that she was not a patient at Boston Medical Center on the day of the bombings as she claimed. She was arrested in New York in July 2013.

Authorities seized the money that was given to her and it will be returned to the One Fund. MICHAEL NAUGHTON

Survey: $80K salary needed to own home in Boston

A survey by a mortgage information website shows that it takes significant earning power to own a home in the Boston area.

The survey, released Tuesday by HSH.com, showed that Boston is within the top five most expensive cities to own a home.

Can you afford it?
NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

The salary needed to afford a median-priced home in Boston is $79,820.01. That's the money needed in order to afford the principal, interest, taxes and insurance payments. Of the 27 metropolitan areas analyzed, San Francisco topped the list with a necessary salary of more than $137,000. METRO

Business official says July minimum wage hike 'too soon'

A business group opposed to an increase in the minimum wage appears resigned to the fact that the wage floor will increase, but plans to tell lawmakers that the proposed July 1 date for an increase from $8 to $9 is "way too soon." During a webinar call on Tuesday, John Regan, executive vice president of Associated Industries of Massachusetts, called the timing of the first bump in the minimum wage a "serious concern" since both the House and Senate proposals under negotiation specify a July 1 implementation date. SHNS

Reassigned. Gun control billboard to be removed from Fenway Park area

The sign must be removed by March 2015. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

An iconic billboard bearing pro-gun-control messages that has been on display near Fenway Park for nearly two decades will soon lose its home.

The 252-foot-long billboard — which features a counter tracking the more than 45,000 people killed by guns in the United States since the December 2012 attack on a Newtown, Connecticut, elementary school — has been a prominent local feature since real estate developer John Rosenthal ordered the first version for a parking garage in 1995.

Rosenthal sold the garage, which overlooks the Massachusetts Turnpike, to the owners of the Red Sox a year ago, and agreed for the sign to come down in March 2015.

Rosenthal, who hopes to find a new location for the sign before it is removed, said he had put it up with a goal of changing the terms of the gun-control debate in the United States.

"You have this historically polarized national debate of unrestricted access to all guns by all people … versus banning all guns," said Rosenthal, who said he owns a firearm.

"That's a very unproductive conversation that has led to a largely preventable epidemic of gun violence," Rosenthal said.

The gun control group Stop Handgun Violence, co-founded by Rosenthal in 1995, changes the message on the billboard about once a year. Past messages included "We have your president & Congress" printed to resemble a ransom note in a reference to the powerful gun lobby, and "Stop Traffic," aimed at curbing the spread of guns between states.

Rosenthal, whose effort to find a new home for his sign has won the support of Mayor Marty Walsh, said he would like to see national changes in gun laws, including mandatory training for all gun owners, background checks for all gun sales and a ban on military-style assault weapons. REUTERS

Cambridge urges 'smaaht' bicycling

Safety. Signs in a new bike safety campaign were inspired by MassDOT's "Use Yah Blinkah" messages.

Inspired by the viral popularity of MassDOT's "Use Yah Blinkah" signs, electronic boards put up by the Cambridge Police Department are warning cyclists to "Be Wicked Safe" and "Be Wicked Smaaht."

"Cycling within Cambridge is obviously very popular," said Jeremy Warnick, the department's director of communications. "The 'wicked' signs were inspired by MassDOT's campaign. We had some other signs posted as well, but they obviously aren't getting the same attention as those signs. We're not trying to be insensitive to the accidents of some in the community, but are really trying to create awareness around bicycle and motorist safety."

The signs, located in Inman Square, Harvard Square and Central Square, also rotate the messages "Drivers: Look 4 Bikes," and "Bikes: Look 4 Motorists," and will be featured through the end of May, which is National Bike Safety Month.

The messages are part of the department's "Safety in Gear" campaign, which stations Cambridge bike and Community Relations officers at highly trafficked areas to hand out fliers with bike safety tips and information on bike laws.

Quoted

"By far the 'wicked' signs have been the most engaging post we've had on Facebook recently. It's created awareness, which is what we're looking for."
Warnick

As for the stylized signs, Warnick said they may make a reappearance.

"We don't want to wear it out, but if it continues to meet goals we may revisit it again."

Cyber-spying. China confronts US envoy over Web hack accusations

A tense stand-off between the United States and China over state-backed cyber espionage has dragged China's secretive hacking unit "61398" back into focus, after the military group was pinpointed last year for mounting cyber attacks on Western commercial targets.

U.S. authorities on Monday charged five Chinese military officers at the unit, accusing them of hacking into American nuclear, metal and solar firms to steal trade secrets. China on Tuesday summoned the U.S. ambassador in Beijing and warned it would retaliate if Washington followed through with the charges. It said the affair would damage "mutual trust."

At the center of the dispute is a nondescript tower block in the northern suburbs of China's financial capital Shanghai, home to Chinese People's Liberation Army (PLA) Unit 61398.

The 12-story block houses as many as several thousand staff, according to Mandiant, a U.S. cyber security firm recently acquired by global network security company FireEye Inc. Mandiant identified the location as the source of a large number of espionage operations in a 70-page report last year. REUTERS

GM recalls another 2.42 million vehicles

General Motors Co. said on Tuesday it is recalling another 2.6 million vehicles globally, raising the number of vehicles it has recalled so far this year to almost 15.4 million.

The four recalls are the latest announced by the largest U.S. automaker, the highest profile of which is the recall of cars with defective ignition switches linked to at least 13 deaths. GM has been criticized by safety advocates and fined by U.S. safety regulators for not catching the faulty switch earlier.

GM also said that it is doubling the charge it expects to take in the second quarter to about $400 million. REUTERS

Newsroom leader

NY Times publisher tried for 'amicable' split with editor

New York Times Co. Chairman and Publisher Arthur Sulzberger Jr. said he tried to part ways peacefully with the top leader of the newsroom, Jill Abramson, whom he ousted last week.

"We originally drafted the whole thing to be very amicable," Sulzberger said in an interview with Vanity Fair, his first since he changed the leadership of his paper. "Jill said no. ... It was my hope for Jill that we could make this go away as peacefully as possible."

The frenzy surrounding the story has been anything but quiet since Sulzberger replaced Abramson with her deputy, Dean Baquet, stunning the Times newsroom and close followers of the paper when it was announced last Wednesday.

The volley of accusations over Abramson's firing has come hard and fast. The New Yorker reported that Abramson was paid considerably less than her male predecessor Bill Keller, a charge Sulzberger denies. REUTERS

Veterans Affairs. House to debate bill on firing rules at veterans' agency

Veterans Affairs Secretary Eric Shinseki. / GETTY IMAGES

The House of Representatives will vote this week on a bill that will make it easier for the Department of Veterans Affairs to fire or demote senior executives, officials said Tuesday, following allegations veterans' health care delays have led to preventable deaths.

The bill addressing the "mess at the Veterans Administration" will "try and provide the tools to the administration to hold senior managers accountable," House Majority Leader Eric Cantor, a Republican, told reporters.

"The American people are frustrated, especially when those who have served our country in uniform have been treated the way they have and God forbid, who have perished because of the mess at the VA," Cantor said at a news conference.

Eric Shinseki, secretary of the department, has faced calls for his resignation over the allegations. REUTERS

Carney also said Nabors was meeting on Tuesday with representatives from a number of veterans organizations, such as the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars, and would have similar sessions while in Phoenix. REUTERS

Cops: Woman made 3-year old girl eat her own feces

An Arizona woman was arrested over the weekend on suspicion of forcing a 3-year-old girl to eat her own feces after the girl defecated in a bathtub, court records show.

Nicole Candelaria, 28, was arrested Saturday and booked on suspicion of child abuse after the girl — her boyfriend's daughter — reported the incident to the girl's mother, according to police.

The girl told authorities that Candelaria became enraged after her accident, made her eat the feces and forcibly held the girl on a toilet, police said. The child's allegations were corroborated by her siblings.

A forensic medical exam showed bruising consistent with being held on the toilet, police said.

Candelaria denied the allegations and countered that the girl is a frequent liar, the statement said.

She posted $5,400 bail on Sunday and is scheduled to appear in court Friday. REUTERS

The child, along with her two siblings, ages 5 and 3, had spent six days with their father before returning to the mother on Friday. Candelaria watched the children while the father was at work, according to police.

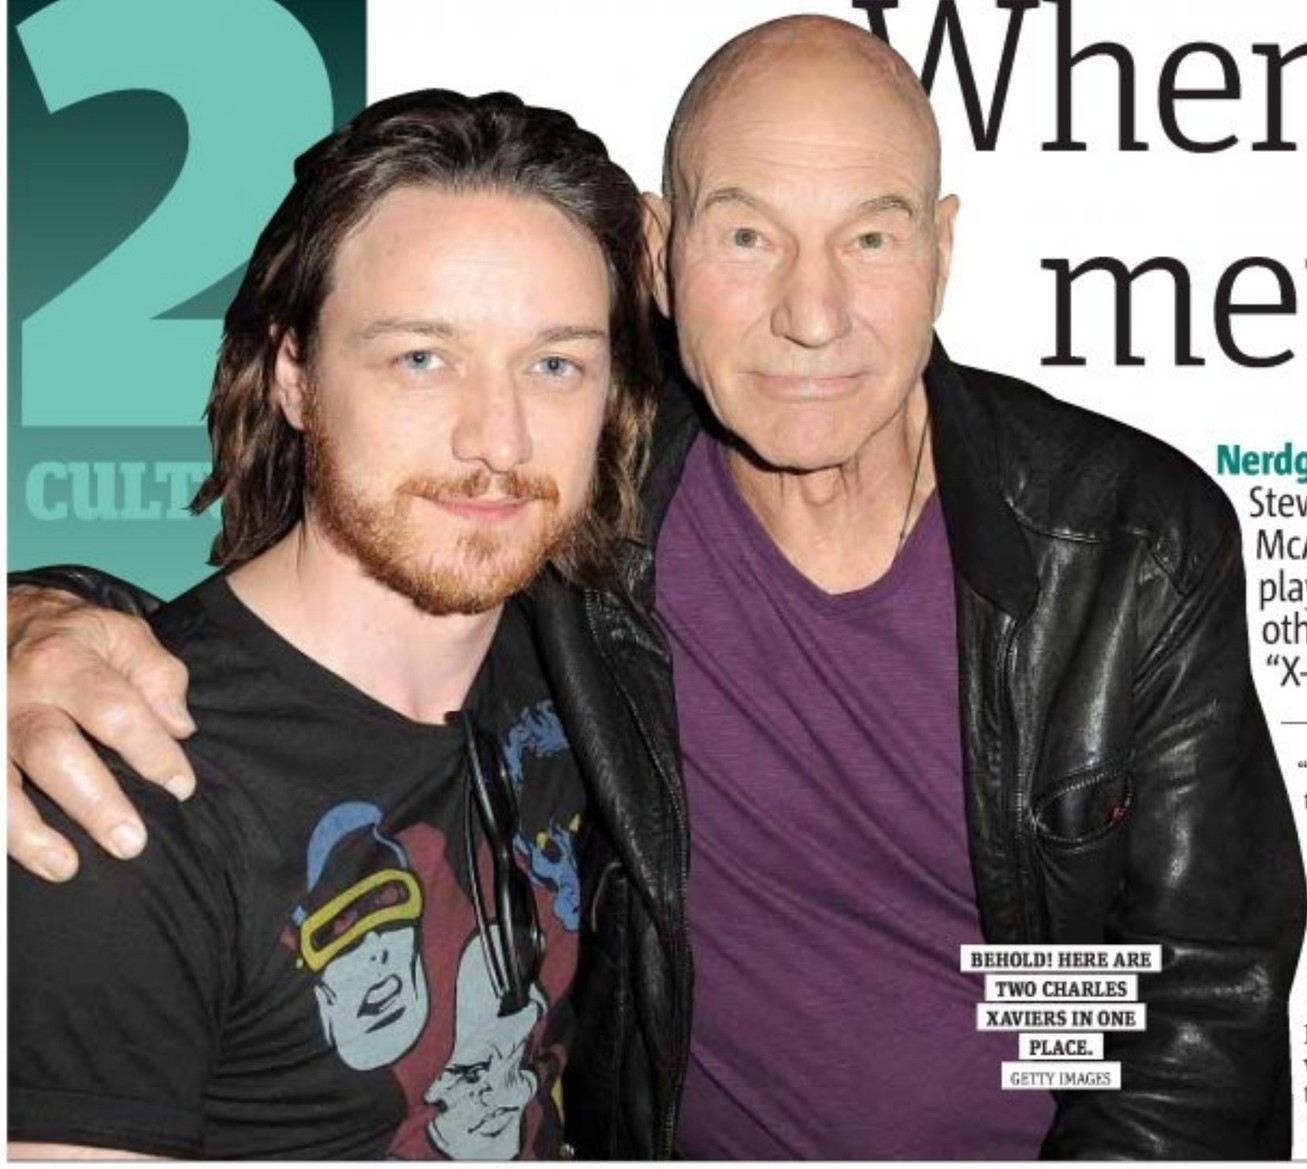
2 CULT

When Professor X met Professor X



BEHOLD! HERE ARE TWO CHARLES XAVIERS IN ONE PLACE. GETTY IMAGES

Nerdgasm. Patrick Stewart and James McAvoy talk about playing each other in the new "X-Men."

"X-Men: Days of Future Past" allows for a rare occurrence, not only in the comics franchise but in movies in general. It's a time-travel picture, with the older mutants sending Hugh Jackman's Wolverine back to 1973 to thwart a dystopian future with mutant-killing robots. That means we get to see both the old and young versions of the same character, namely Professor Charles Xavier (Patrick Stewart and James McAvoy, respectively), as well as two Magnetos (Ian McKellen and Michael Fassbender).

The only duo that shares any scenes is Stewart and McAvoy, when both characters meet up for a little nerd-electrifying pow-wow.

"It was James' first day of work and it was my last day of work," recalls Stewart of shooting the scene. "My bags were packed, and I was ready to get out of Dodge." He says they didn't belabor the scene.

"I don't recall rehearsing it. We knew the lines and they rolled the cameras; it was four minutes' work. I shouldn't have said that — I should have said we worked on it for weeks," he says.

McAvoy obviously had much to draw on for his performance.

"I've been a fan [of Stewart's] for years," McAvoy says. "I watched the ['X-Men'] films, and 'Star Trek,' all the way back to 'Dune.' I don't know if anyone remembers 'Dune.'" (Stewart played a mulleted Gurney Halleck in the 1984 David Lynch film.)

"I watched the empathy that pours out of him in his previous movies," he continues. "It's the prime characteristic of Professor X: this willingness to care and reach out and help."

He wasn't the only one studying another actor's performance. Stewart studied McAvoy as well. "It made me want to go back and shoot it again, now that I knew where I came from. I could get so much more James McAvoy into that performance," he says, somewhat jokingly.

See more at www.metro.us

At the same time, Charles Xavier is in a very different spot than he has been in any other movie. "We've seen that the good professor always has options, and those options have been through negotiation, persuasion, some resolution that will not be violent," Stewart says. "From the beginning of this movie, there is no other option.

"Our enemy this time is not available for rational conversation or to be reasoned with. The Professor has to make the decision to destroy something to survive. It toughens Xavier up."

McKellen MIA

Solo Magneto

MICHAEL FASSBENDER RETURNS AS THE YOUNGER IAN MCKELLEN. ALAN MARKFIELD

Tragically, Ian McKellen could not attend the press junket in New York, which would have reunited him with his dear friend and funny picture buddy, Stewart. That also meant that the two Magnetos couldn't butt heads. In fact, McKellen and Fassbender didn't even see each other on set.

"We sort of kept missing each other," Fassbender recalls. That doesn't mean he wasn't studying his work, however. "For this one I spent a lot of time with this video on YouTube, which was Ian McKellen in the 1970s doing this workshop on 'Macbeth.' I was playing that over and over again, getting more of the rhythms and tones of his voice." This, of course, means no onscreen meet-up. "Unfortunately, we didn't get a scene together. We flipped a coin, and James and Patrick won the toss," he jokes.

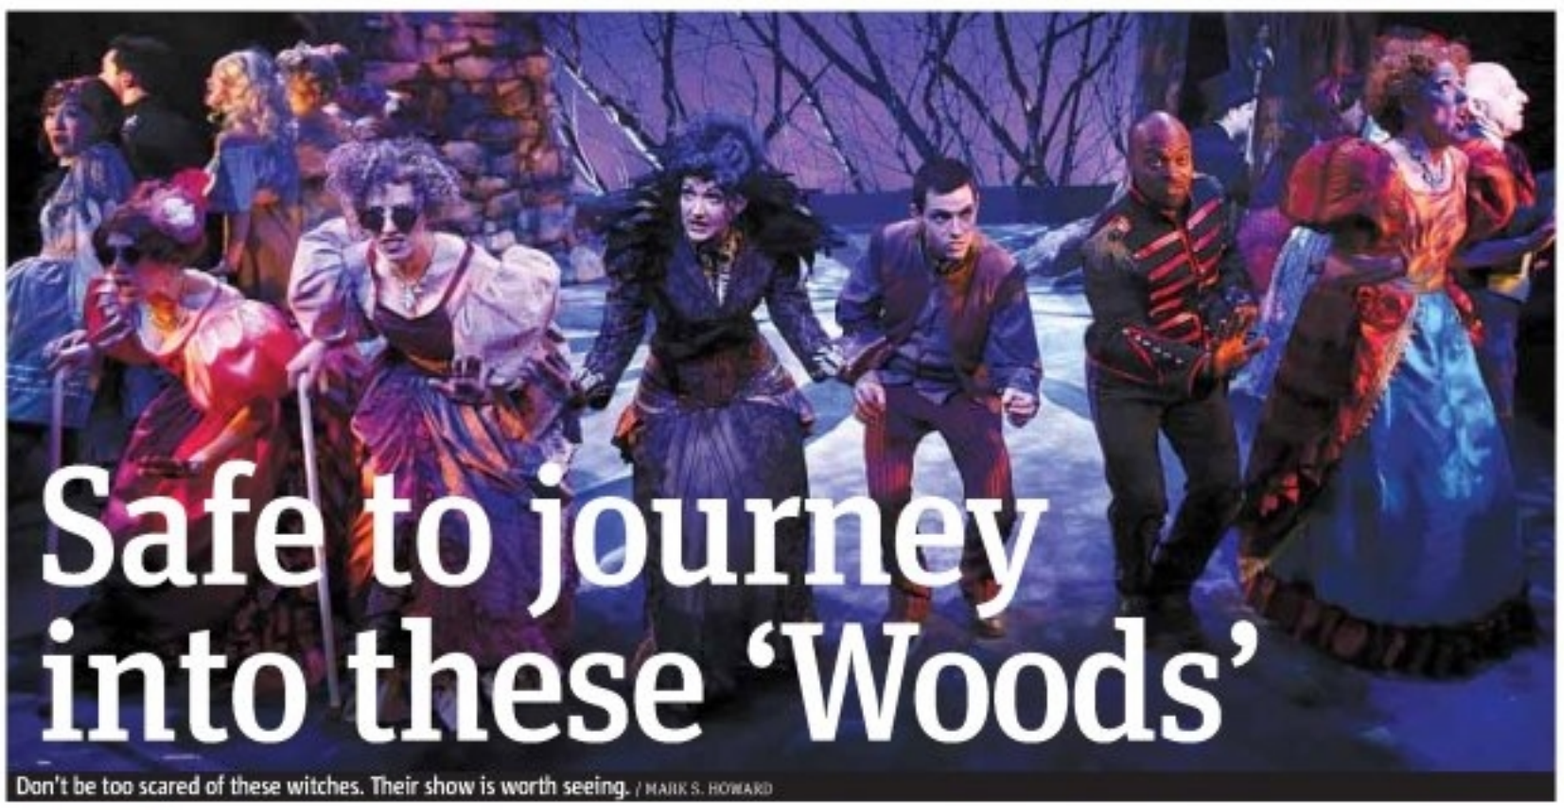
Review. The latest from Lyric Stage Company is "close to perfect."

Safe to journey into these 'Woods'



Don't be too scared of these witches. Their show is worth seeing. / MARK S. HOWARD

"Into the Woods" is one of Stephen Sondheim's most popular musicals, and if the Lyric Stage Company's current production is any indication, it's easy to see why.

Director Spiro Veloudos almost magically transforms the small confines of the Lyric into the perfect backdrop for Sondheim and James Lapine's musical reinterpretation of classic fairy tales. The big, busy show, which in lesser hands could easily overwhelm the space, is as close to perfect as the Lyric has ever come.

The adapted mishmash of Grimm fairy tales exposes the dark underbelly of happily-ever-after as the likes of Cinderella, Red Riding Hood and Jack (of beanstock fame) pay the price for their self-serving wishes. And while many of your favorites meet ill-fated endings, Veloudos and company have imbued the production with enough humor, tenderness and passion to make it a delightful journey.

The Witch (Aimee Doherty) starts the ball of destruction rolling with a curse on the Baker (John Ambrosino) and his Wife (Lisa Yuen). In order to overcome the curse, they must find a red cape, blonde hair, a golden slipper and a white cow. So begins the intertwining of the classic fables.

Doherty's outstanding turn as the Witch includes many vengeful, menacing moments as well as a gut-wrenching performance of "Stay With Me." Erica Spyres proves, yet again, she can do anything with her flawless portrayal of Cinderella and tear-inducing rendition of "No One Is Alone."

Ambrosino and Yuen also shine as the only original characters in the show, while Maritza Bostic enjoys several near scene-stealing moments as Little Red Riding Hood.

While danger lurks around every corner in these "Woods," this stellar ensemble makes the trek worthwhile.

What you don't know (but should!) about skin cancer

Tip

A spray-on won't cut it

"Spray-on sunscreens make it real easy to miss big areas of your body, or small areas [that] you don't know you've missed," says Dr. Shultz.

Health. Protect yourself this summer with these summer sun safety tips.

Have fun in the sun, but always remember to reapply sunscreen. / DIGITAL VISION

You know to apply — and reapply — sunscreen. You know to buy the broad-spectrum kind. You know that you should get weird-looking moles checked out. But what you don't know about sun protection could mean the difference between a summer on the beach and one on the operating table. We asked derms to fill us in on the beyond-basic skin rules you need to know for protecting yourself this summer.

1 You need sunscreen every. single. day. Yes, even when it's cloudy, raining, sleeting — you get the idea. The sun beams out UVA and UVB rays; the latter are the sun's most damaging during the summer months, says Dr. Neal Shultz, a New York City dermatologist. Use sunscreen as the first layer of products you apply to your face each morning.

2 You're sweating off sunscreen more than you think. You definitely want to reapply after you go for a dip and after you get sweaty. But even if you're just lounging around, you still need to reapply it every two to three hours because perspiration will invisibly wash away the sunscreen, says Shultz.

3 You don't really need SPF 100. You might think you're doing your skin some extra good, but really, even a 15 provides almost 90 percent protection. "Whether the SPF is 15, 30 or 100, it needs to be reapplied with the same frequency," Shultz says.

4 Boozing? You're more likely to burn. When you're drinking, your skin is way more vulnerable to the sun. That's because alcohol dilates your blood vessels, meaning there's more red in your skin, and "the pinker the skin, the closer the blood cells are to the surface — and therefore, they absorb more damaging UV rays," Shultz says.

5 You can get skin cancer in spots that aren't exposed to the sun. Even if you're not sunbathing in the nude, you can still get skin cancer in your groin and anus. Other weird places you can get it? Behind your eye and in your mucus membranes, like inside your nose and mouth. Get these checked out at your annual exams, recommends Dr. Sapna Patel, assistant professor of melanoma medical oncology at the University of Texas MD Anderson Cancer Center.

6 If it bleeds, it leads. A mole that gets bloody with minimal trauma is something to watch out for, says Dr. Patel. "Most benign things shouldn't have a blood vessel in them — it's malignant things that are digging in and growing roots."

Celebrating 10 years of Serving the Women of Boston

New Research Showing Progress in Breast Cancer Treatment

Breast cancer is the most common cancer among American women (except for skin cancers), and more than 230,000 new cases will be diagnosed this year, according to the American Cancer Society (ACS). This translates to about 1 in 8 women in the U.S. who will develop invasive breast cancer in their lifetime, the ACS says.

With such a large population of patients, researchers at the Susan F. Smith Center for Women's Cancers at Dana-Farber in Boston are actively pursuing new approaches to breast cancer therapy, prevention and symptom management through clinical trials. In recent months, results from these trials have provided new information about possible treatments that could be more effective in fighting the disease.

- In one recent study, researchers have found new drug combinations that might be more effective against triple-negative breast cancer, a form of the disease that affects 10-15 percent of breast cancer patients. The study showed that when the chemotherapy drug carboplatin is used, or added to other chemotherapy treatments, there was a sharp increase in the number of tumors that shrank away completely.

"We want to avoid giving patients extra drugs that they do not need, and, if possible, replace current treatment with a drug that is more specific to a woman's cancer and potentially more effective," says.

Winer also worked with researchers on another combination treatment method, which uses a less toxic approach in women with small, HER2+ cancer who have already undergone surgery. In spite of having fewer side effects than some of the standard regimens, it was highly effective in this group of patients with early stage disease.

Eric Winer, MD, senior author of the study and director of the Breast Oncology Program in the Susan F. Smith Center for Women's Cancers at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute

Another recent study led by experts at Dana-Farber has shown that exercise can reduce joint pain caused by certain breast cancer drugs. These drugs, known as aromatase inhibitors, are used to treat post-menopausal patients who have breast cancer tumors that are sensitive to hormones. While effective, the aromatase inhibitors often cause joint pain.

According to the study, moderate daily exercise helped decrease joint pain in the women who were taking the aromatase inhibitors. The pain also decreased significantly more in those who exercised than in those who didn't.

If you or someone you know is looking for more information about the latest breast cancer treatments and research, tune in to a live video web chat with Dana-Farber on May 22, 2014, at 1p.m. Eric Winer, MD will answer questions about new therapies, clinical trials, and exciting new research in the world of breast cancer. For more information or to tune in to the chat, visit www.danafarber.org/webchats. Email your questions to Dr. Winer at webchats@dfci.harvard.edu.

"This is one of the first studies to identify an approach – particularly a non-medical approach – that can effectively lower joint pain for these patients," says the study's senior author, Jennifer Ligibel, MD, a breast oncologist with the Susan F. Smith Center. "Exercise offers an attractive option for patients who want to continue taking these drugs but who are burdened by their side effects."

New England Eye Center

From our all-laser, bladeless LASIK procedure – to exciting developments like our Visian Implantable lens - our commitment to leading edge technology is surpassed only by our dedication to personalized patient care. Patients of New England Eye Center find confidence in knowing we offer experience you can trust and technology you can rely on.

NASA-Approved LASIK - Our all-laser, bladeless LASIK at New England Eye Center has greatly improved results and helped take the fear out of having LASIK. The vast majority of our LASIK and PRK patients now achieve 20/20 vision at distance without glasses or contact lenses. Our method of LASIK is the same type approved for NASA astronauts and military pilots.

Implantable Contact Lens - New England Eye Center is among a select group of practices in the country offering patients the benefits of the Visian Implantable Collamer Lens (ICL). Unlike LASIK, the Visian corrects vision by inserting a delicate intraocular lens-like device atop the eye's natural lens, which is why the Visian is also referred to as the 'Implantable Contact Lens.' All of the refractive surgeons at New England Eye Center are qualified and experienced in performing this brief outpatient procedure to insert the Visian ICL. Because no corneal or other tissue is removed in the Visian ICL procedure, visual recovery is extremely rapid and the ICL can potentially be replaced if the eye's focus changes over time.

Refractive Lens Exchange - If you're frustrated with reading glasses and bifocals, our refractive specialists perform a procedure known as Refractive Lens Exchange. By replacing your eye's aging natural lens with a Intraocular Lens Implant customized specifically for your visual needs - and your lifestyle - allowing you to see better, look younger and never have to worry about developing cataracts!

Laser Cataract Surgery - For seniors experiencing changes in their vision – or who have been diagnosed with a cataract – New England Eye Center is turning the dream of Laser Cataract Surgery into reality. We are currently among only the top 3% of practices in the country to offer patients the added precision and accuracy of Laser Cataract Surgery using OptiMedica® Catalys™ Precision Laser System.

This year, take your vision to the NEXT LEVEL by giving yourself or a loved one the Gift of Sight. Now that's a Gift that keeps on Giving. A blessed New Year from the surgeons and staff of New England Eye Center.

IRS admitted to wrongdoing

Re: 'IRS follows the law' (Metro, May 20) The IRS admitted it improperly targeted conservative groups for additional scrutiny, and apologized for it. During the time period in question, 104 conservative groups underwent additional scrutiny versus seven progressive groups. Additionally, the intrusiveness of the additional scrutiny was far greater for the conservative groups than for the progressive groups.

A fatal physics problem

Re: 'Salmoning is safer for cyclists' (Metro, May 16-18) Who are all the bikers who choose to ride against traffic? As a driver and as a bicyclist, I am so disturbed by the fact that people choose to "...always ride bikes against traffic." It's so dangerous for both parties: With a bike going 10 miles per hour and a vehicle going 30-40 miles per hour heading toward one another, that doesn't leave time to prevent a head-on collision.

MIKE DISCOLO, VIA EMAIL

Have these people saying they prefer to ride a bike against the traffic ever heard of a great invention called a rearview mirror? They make them for bicycles, too. You can ride with the traffic AND see what's behind you!

'T' for terrible

'Report: MBTA driver in overpass crash on phone' (Metro, May 20) As someone who rides the T daily, the latest bus crash comes as no surprise. The drivers working for the MBTA are known for blowing red lights, whipping around corners and speeding and then slamming on their brakes, all with a bus full of standing passengers. The drivers are rude, hostile and behave as if the very job they've been hired to do is an inconvenience. The MBTA is a joke and the only people unaware of this appears to be the MBTA.

Luck of the Irish not on C's side in lottery

NBA. The Celtics dropped a spot in draft order in the NBA lottery and will pick No. 6 overall.

The Celtics once again left the NBA draft lottery frustrated as they slid from the No. 5 to No. 6 spot Tuesday night, ahead of the player draft on Thursday, June 26.

It wasn't an entirely surprising result for the C's considering they had a 34.21 percent chance at landing at No. 6. They had a 10.3 percent chance at the top overall pick going in and a 23.83 percent chance at standing pat at No. 5. They could have done worse than they did as well as they had an 8.18 percent chance at falling to No. 7 and an 0.37 percent chance at landing at No. 8.

Cleveland was the big winner on lottery night as the Cavs had just a 1.7 percent chance at landing the top overall selection. The Cavs also struck gold in the lottery last year and in 2011.

The Milwaukee Bucks had a 25 percent shot at landing the top pick but fell to No. 2. The 76ers got the third pick while the Celtics archrival, the Lakers, fell from No. 6 to No. 7.

The Celtics had solid odds to land top overall picks in 1997 and 2007, but also came up relatively empty.

MATT BURKE

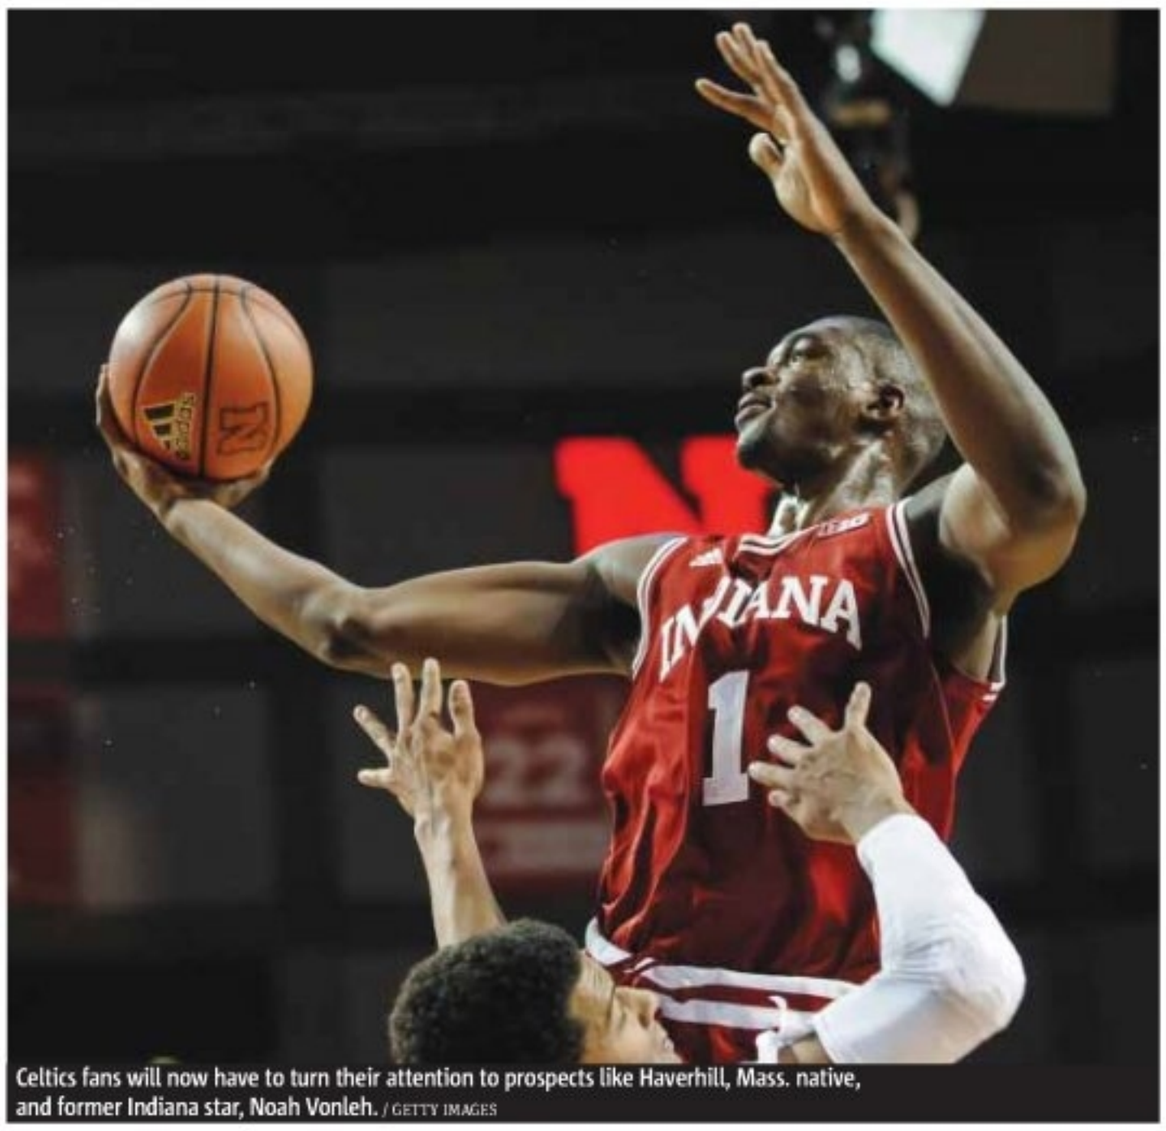
Who'll be there?

Here are some names who could be there for the Celtics to grab at No. 6 overall:

- Julius Randle, PF, Kentucky
- Noah Vonleh, PF, Indiana
- Dante Exum, PG/SG, Australia
- Aaron Gordon, PF, Arizona
- Marcus Smart, PG, OK State
- Doug McDermott, SF, Creighton
- James Young, SG/SF, Kentucky



Celtics fans will now have to turn their attention to prospects like Haverhill, Mass. native, and former Indiana star, Noah Vonleh. / GETTY IMAGES

Steady improvement

Nava hoping for another chance in Boston

Last season was a breakout campaign for Red Sox outfielder Daniel Nava. He posted a line of .303/.385/.445, which had him among the best American League outfielders, trailing just Mike Trout and Torii Hunter in batting average and just Trout in on-base percentage.

Much like the Red Sox as a team, 2014 hasn't been too kind to the switch-hitter. After hitting .149 in 17 games, Nava was sent down to Triple-A Pawtucket, where he's been since April 23.

"Things are good," Nava said on Monday. "Everyone here is trying to get better and work on their games, so I'm just another guy trying to work on stuff that I'm not as good at as I'd like to be."

Daniel Nava was sent to Pawtucket on April 23. / GETTY IMAGES

In 20 games, Nava is hitting .275/.370/.435, but has improved in areas manager John Farrell pointed to at the time he was sent down, which included hitting from the right side of the plate — as he had just two hits in 21 at-bats. He has gotten better as he's batting .227 against opposing left-handers.

"I don't know," Nava said when asked if he feels like he's doing better from the right side. "I don't pay attention to numbers, but I'm feeling more comfortable."

While Nava is using the time at Pawtucket to improve on perceived weaknesses, he hasn't lost sight of his overall game and what made him a major leaguer to begin with.

"I didn't come down here working on one particular thing," he said. "I had a lot of things that I needed to address. I've been working on getting more comfortable and to start feeling a little bit better in the box and I feel like I've done that."

"I didn't come down here working on one particular thing. I had a lot of things that I needed to address."

Daniel Nava,
on his demotion to Triple-A Pawtucket

Coming off a season like he had in 2013 and winning a World Series, Nava could be looking at the current Red Sox team with their recent struggles — particularly in the outfield — and wonder why he hasn't been called back up. But the 31-year-old hasn't done any of that.

"No, it doesn't matter. Just from the perspective of the more you focus on that [type of thing], the less you focus on the field," said Nava. "I mean, I pay attention in terms of how the team is doing, but I don't sit there and breakdown what a guy is doing in terms of offensively and defensively, because when you start doing that you take your energy away from playing baseball. Those aren't my decisions anyway."

As it stands currently, the Red Sox outfield has a number of players underperforming, including Grady Sizemore, who is batting .227/.297/.348 and just .239 against righties.

Drew re-ups with Sox

The Red Sox re-signed shortstop Stephen Drew on Tuesday, according to multiple reports. The deal is reportedly worth $10 million for the rest of the season. Drew and his agent Scott Boras had been holding out for months in search of a favorable deal. The 31-year-old hit .253 during Boston's run to the World Series in 2013, bashing 13 homers and driving in 67 runs. He is expected to be available to play for the Sox by next week.
